David M. Mayer is a Michael R. and Mary Kay Hallman Fellow and Associate Professor in the Management and Organizations Department at the University of Michigan’s Ross School of Business. He received his Ph.D. from the University of Maryland.

His research interests concern social and ethical issues in organizations. Specifically, he conducts research in three major areas: (1) behavioral ethics, (2) organizational justice, and (3) workplace diversity. His research focuses on how leaders can develop their skills as well as how leaders can help create work environments that discourage unethical behavior and promote helpful behavior. Drawing on this research, Dave works with individuals and organizations to improve their ability to lead ethically and to help improve the interpersonal dynamics of their employees.

His research has been published in the top scholarly journals focusing on leadership and ethics such as the Academy of Management Journal, Journal of Applied Psychology, Organizational Behavior and Human Decision Processes, and Personnel Psychology, and he is on the editorial board of all of these journals. He has also written several books’ chapters on issues surrounding leadership and ethics. Dave has worked with a variety of companies on these issues such as the Ethics Resource Center, Giant Eagle, Humana, Lockheed Martin, Personnel Decisions Research Institute, P.H.I. Consulting Group, Schwan’s, and SunTrust.

“I found the Michigan Model of Leadership portion of the program to be very valuable and set the foundation for the week. As an executive, I need to be aware of the model’s four quadrants and know how to effectively manage from each. The program provided practical ideas on how to do it. The teaching and format was very interactive and allowed me to learn not only from the faculty but from other executives in the class. It’s only been a few weeks since the program, but I have been able to implement several concepts, such as tools on time management, having fierce conversations, or ‘carefrontations,’ and managing energy.”

–Daniel Neubauer, General Manager, Toyota Technical Center
As a senior leader, your ability to align and motivate your team to drive business results is crucial to your success and the success of your organization. This program will challenge you to adopt new research-backed ways of thinking that will increase your impact as a leader.
