ANALYTICAL THINKING

This course leads you through a journey on key finance and accounting principles that enable you to understand and interpret financial data and make immediate key financial management decisions in your firm.

It has been said that...

The Language of Business is Accounting

It is how firms communicate essential information about the business to external stakeholders and tells the story of how an organization operates and competes in the marketplace. Finance interprets that information to make critical business decisions. This Analytical Thinking course leads you through a comprehensive journey of key finance and accounting principles to translate a balance sheet into a management tool.

This course incorporates real examples focusing on decision-making to help you interpret financials like a profit and loss owner. By the end of this course, you'll have developed a toolkit to measure your firm's value generation process and also understand and make key financial decisions at your firm. Outcomes include:

- › Identify the key value drivers in your organization
- › Diagnose the current performance of your organization using financial statements
- › Build a scorecard to track performance while understanding its tradeoffs
- › Learn how to select investment projects at your organization
- › Consider how a financial investor would determine the value of your organization
- › Explore how the capital markets work and how to evaluate an optimal capital structure
